

COURSE DETAILS

Master's Degree

25711 Concepts of Guidance and Theories in Psychological Counseling (6 credits)

Course Learning Outcomes: To enable students

1. To be able to explain the principles and concepts of guidance and psychological counseling.
2. To be able to explain the concepts and practice guidelines of psychological counseling theories.
3. To be able to apply the concepts of guidance and theories of psychological counseling in conducting guidance and psychological counseling.

Course Description

The knowledge and understanding of the principles and concepts of guidance; psychological theories related to guidance; the principles and concepts of psychological counseling; individual counseling; group counseling; family counseling; and the concepts and practice guidelines of psychological counseling theories.

25712 Research in Guidance and Psychological Counseling (6 credits)

Course Learning Outcomes: To enable students

1. To acquire knowledge and understanding of research methodologies and various types of research.
2. To acquire knowledge, understanding and ability in quality evaluation of research in guidance and psychological counseling.
3. To possess researcher's code of conduct and ability to conduct a research in guidance and psychological counseling conforming with academic standards.

Course Description

Educational research methodologies, literature review for educational research, research planning and data compilation, statistic methodology for research, descriptive research, experimental research, qualitative research, researcher's code of conduct, concepts relating to research in guidance and psychological counseling, research relating to personnel positioning management services, research relating to follow-up services and evaluation of guidance and psychological counseling, research relating to instrument and activities for guidance and psychological counseling and research relating to administration, services and academic guidance and psychological counseling.

25713 Seminar in Guidance and Psychological Counseling (6 credits)

Course Learning Outcomes: To enable students

1. To be able to analyze, criticize and synthesize the current conditions of social problems, educational problems, organizational problems, family problems, as well as related problems in guidance and psychological counseling.
2. To be able to explain, give examples and apply the innovations, concepts, and new body of knowledge in guidance and psychological counseling.
3. To be able to determine the guidelines for development and/or solve problems related to guidance and psychological counseling.

Course Description

The study, search, analysis, criticize and synthesize of the current condition, related factors, trends and directions of social problems, educational problems, organizational problems, family problems, and guidance problems related to all of the five services of guidance, namely, the individual data collection and study service, the information service, the counseling service, the placement service, and the follow-up and evaluation service; the psychological counseling problems that cover the service receivers in every age group from the related literature; the enhancement and development of the body of knowledge on innovations and new concepts in guidance and psychological counseling; and the determination of guidelines for development and/or solving problems related to guidance and psychological counseling.

25714 Development of Guidance and Psychological Counseling (6 credits)

Activities and Instruments

Course Learning Outcomes: To enable students

1. To be able to take the knowledge on development of guidance and psychological counseling activities and instruments to be applied for efficiently creating the instruments for guidance and psychological counseling.
2. To be able to take the knowledge on development of guidance and psychological counseling activities and instruments to be applied for appropriately organizing the guidance and psychological counseling activities.

Course Description

The basic principles and concepts in development of guidance and psychological counseling instruments and activities; development of standardized tests; standardized instruments for the study of occupations, personal data, and society; guidance and psychological counseling instruments that can be constructed by oneself; the principles of creation and development of guidance activities; activities in educational, occupational, personal and social guidance; innovations and technology for development of guidance and psychological counseling instruments and activities; and quality verification, quality evaluation, and reporting the results of using the developed guidance and psychological counseling instruments and activities.

25715 Guidance and Psychological Counseling in Organizations (6 credits)*Course Learning Outcomes: To enable students

1. To understand concepts related to Guidance and Psychological Counseling in Organizations.
2. To understand the principles of Guidance and Psychological Counseling in Organizations.
3. To be able to responsible for public relations and coordination works in Guidance and Psychological Counseling in Organizations.
4. To be able to apply the principles of Guidance and Psychological Counseling in practice and to develop their Guidance and Psychological Counseling in Organizations.

Course Description

Concepts regarding guidance and psychological counseling in organizations; psychology for guidance and psychological counseling in organizations; personnel concerned with guidance and psychological counseling in organizations; administration and management of work concerning guidance and psychological counseling in organizations; communications and work team creation; negotiations for conflict elimination; creation of morale and motivation; behavior modification for personnel in organizations; hygiene promotion for personnel of organizations; guidance in organizations; psychological counseling in organizations; virtues, ethics and good governance in organizations; research on guidance and psychological counseling in organizations; psychological tools for guidance and psychological counseling in organizations; and innovations and trends of guidance and psychological counseling in organizations.

25794 Independent Study (Guidance and Psychological Counseling) (6 credits)*Course Learning Outcomes: To enable students

To enable students to possess skills in applying concepts, theories and methods obtained from studied courses and related experience to independent study or research on guidance and psychological counseling, to topics crucial to development of guidance and psychological counseling and/or topic of students' special interest.

Course Description

Selection of problems for independent study or research which is a crucial issue for development of guidance and psychological counseling and/or topic of students' special interest, writing a project, synthesis of literature review, data compilation and analysis and presentation of independent study or research.

25795 Thesis (Guidance and Psychological Counseling) (12 credits)*Course Learning Outcomes: Upon completion of the course, students should

1. To be able to select research problems for a thesis.
2. To be able to survey and analyze literature related to the thesis.
3. To be able to design research for the thesis.
4. To gain knowledge and skill in writing and presenting the thesis proposal.
5. To be able to develop quantitative research tools.
6. To be able to develop qualitative research tools.

7. To be able to collect, analyze, and present data for the thesis.
8. To be able to present and defend the thesis examination.
9. To be able to write the complete thesis report.
10. To be able to write the research report for publication.

Course Description

Selection of the research problem; survey and analysis of relevant literature; research design; writing and presenting a thesis proposal; tool development for thesis research, both quantitative and qualitative research; data collection; thesis data presentation; thesis presentation and examination defending; writing the complete thesis report; writing the research report for publication.

25796 Graduate Professional Experience in Guidance and Psychological Counseling (6 credits)

Course Learning Outcomes

1. To enhance and develop the appropriate personality of being a guidance and psychological counselor.
2. To promote and develop academic leadership in the guidance and psychological counseling profession.
3. To develop the skills in providing individual, group, and family psychological counseling services.
4. To promote the development of guidance and psychological counseling profession.
5. To promote the guidance and psychological counselor's awareness of attitudes, morality and professional code of ethics.

Course Description

The vision of guidance and psychological counselor; the analysis and organization of guidance centers and psychological counseling service centers; the administration of guidance and psychological counseling work; the self-development to have appropriate personality and good attitudes toward the profession; the promotion and development of professional leadership; the enhancement of human relationship and ability in working as a team or group; the skills of providing individual, group, and family psychological counseling services; the development of professional problem solving skills; and the promotion of attitudes, morality and professional codes of ethics of the professionals in guidance and psychological counseling.

Last updated: 21-July-2023